Buying Laundry Supplies

Every homemaker wants to buy the type of laundry supplies that will do the best job at the least cost. When shopping for such supplies she should consider the use of the product. Good results in laundry depend largely on the correct use of the right detergent. Heavy duty detergents are recommended for general purpose laundry and heavily soiled clothes. Light duty detergents are for washing fine fabrics and lightly soiled clothes.

Does your washing machine require a high - sudsing or low-sudsing type of detergent? The low - sudsing ones are for use in tumbler - action washers and many of the side - loading machines.

Is a bleach needed? Two general types are most used-chlorine bleaches and all - purpose bleaches. Chlorine bleaches may be in liquid or granular from. The liquid type acts on stains quicker, but is more likely to damage fabrics if improperly used. Liquid chlorine bleaches should be measured and diluted before being added to the wash water. Chlorine bleach is not used on woolens, silks, rayons, acetates, and some of the new and delicate fabrics, and non-fast colors. All purpose bleaches may be used safely on all fabrics. They are mild and light duty.

Will the cost of a fabric soften or be offset by improved characteristics of the laundered fabric? Softeners act directly on the fabric and usually are effective in both hard and soft water. Softeners used in the rinse water coat the fabric and help eliminate static electricity. They also are valuable in eliminating wrinkles to make ironing easier. Always measure and use according to the directions on the box.

Instant Cheese

Add cheddar and blue cheeses to the already long list of instant food. They'll soon be available at your supermarket. The product of food scientists at Michigan State University's Agricultural Experiment Station, the new instant cheeses may be used in au gratin potatoes, Welsh rarebit, soup and vegetable garnishes, macaroni and cheese dinners, and chip dips. Or, you can use them just as they are for flavoring casseroles, soups, pizza and souffles. To reconstitute the cheeses, add water and stir.

Kitchen Safety

Are you safe in your kitchen? Studies show that many accidents occur in the kitchen. Most of them are the result of carelessness — not bad luck. Your kitchen is a workshop where you use many tools, pieces of equipment, and supplies. If you use them incorrectly or carelessly, an accident is in the making.

Inspect your cupboards and drawers. Keep knives, scissors, and other sharp objects in holders or some secure place. Use a well - constructed step ladder or step stool for reaching up to high shelves. Beware of a chair or a box. Wipe up immediately spilled water or grease. Check handles of kettles and skillets to be sure they are securely attached. A loose handle may cause you to spill boiling grease or water, and burn yourself or someone else. Remember that curtains too near the range are a fire hazard. Examine small electrical appliances for frayed wires and loose connections. Do not let electric appliance cords hang down from the counter. Have a fire extinguisher located in or near the kitchen, and teach all members how to use it. Don't neglect drilling your family members on how to call the fire and first aid departments. And finally, carry adequate insurance on your house and its contents.

Lions Begin Fruit Cake Sale

Local Lions Club Members are once again selling fruit cakes for the holiday season.

Chairman of the sale is Richard Robinson, of Robinson's Funeral Home. He reports that more than 1268 pounds of fruit cake will be offered this year. Many Lions are already taking orders for the three pound cakes.

Better vision for all of the county is the reason for the sale. Proceeds go to purchase glasses for anyone who is unable to afford his own, Lion Robinson said.

"This is the best commercial cake I ever ate," reported the chairman. He asks readers to 'buy now for a tasty, happy, holiday.'

Correction

"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," wrote Shakespeare some time ago. And likewise, the TIMES VIRGINIAN hopes that all our readers will recognize all our advertisers — no matter how they're printed up!

Our good friend, R. E. Wilburn, is WILBUN, not Wilburn as printed last week. We understand that business in his market is even better — Following a steadie ad for Wilburn's Cash Store (and a sizeable error in printing his name.) So to Mr. Wilburn, our apologies about the spelling, and continued good business to this well known food market!

To another advertiser, it's a case of a telephone number. Mrs. Edwin Carter (Becky Carter — Beautician) can be reached at 352-7431 — not at the number printed.

And then there's the matter of the Ladies' Football game. It's FRIDAY, the 16th of November. County Music and the Elementary PTA meeting are scheduled for November 15.
